>Green Shadow:

She had a purple hooded cape and dark eyes that somehow sparkled in the moon-light and the way she moved was graceful and swift as she attacked the foot soldier that jumped out on you on your walk home. Yeah, a zombie. You used to live in suburbia but now lived on the 'brighter side of things' which in other worlds, was the plant's side of town. After the Zombies had taken over, everyone that lived in Suburbia previously, had been evacuated and moved into homes in this new town which the plants protected with all their might.

You name was (F/N, L/N).

You had been one of the hundreds of people evacuated.

You had lived alone but you owned a Pixie-bob cat you named Oreo and your life had been somewhat uneventful.

Go to work, hang out with friends, go home, feed your cat, go to sleep-

Rinse & repeat.

Until tonightâ€¦.

There had been rumors going around about how the mysterious 'Booming' sound that could be heard all around the town was the birth of a new hopeâ€¦

Heroes.

'ClichÃ©', you thought and naturally you didn't believe them. You simply brushed it off as another simple case of 'Zomboss is screwing around again and trying to cause trouble as always!'. It's not like it was the first time that he had blew something up.

But all of your doubts about the rumorsâ€¦were just-

_Poof!_

Gone like that.

You could tell that she had known what she was doing. She downed the zombie in nothing but a few seconds and with a loud thud and poof, the foot soldier dissolved into dust and away in the wind his remains went, heading back in the direction of Zomboss's base. You look up and there she is, standing before youâ€¦Her cape gently flowing in the wind behind her. You can see the street-lights reflecting off of the gold L.E.A.F medallion that rested in the front of her cape where it was proudly displayed. She holds out her leaf/hand to help you up.

You sit there looking at her in aweâ€¦the way the light bounces off her eyes has you mesmerizedâ€¦

"Are you okay?"

Her voice-! Oh her voice! It sounds like a sweet melody as it graced your ears...

"Hello?"

You snap out of your trance and blink at her when you feel the heat rise in your face once you realize that you had just been staring this whole time and not answering her. You shake your head quickly as though it would rid you of the blush gracing your cheeks but it doesn't, in-fact it does the complete and total opposite. She gives you a very confused look, still holding out her hand though she was slowly beginning to draw back.

You finally reach out, about to grasp her hand when there is a sudden yelling in the distance. Her head quickly snaps in the direction of the scream and snatches her hand away just before you could grab it.

You fall forwardâ€¦but you catch yourself.

Without saying another word, she is about to head off in the other directionâ€¦whenâ€¦she stops and glances back, before she bounds off into the night.

>Solar Flare:

OK Arcade, your favorite play to play your favorite game, the classic: 'Street Fighter 2'. Every day after school, you would come here and play a few other games but you would always end your day with Street Fighter. It was like a breath of fresh air each time you played it and you needed it, especially after the move out of Suburbia.

Oh yeah, you were a-part of the move after Zomboss had taken over the other half of townâ€¦It was lame and things were slightly more cramped but when you played your game, you felt like you were in your own little world where everything wasn't as cramped.

You push one of the glass double doors open and step inside looking at all of the other plants and humans playing the other games.

You almost forgot about themâ€¦the plants. They were always around town, they acted just like humans but goofier and when they started going to school, things changed and they certainly made school more interesting than it was before and you stopped falling asleep as much. But other than that, you never really noticed them much. They were cool and you didn't have a problem with them.

You began walking to the arcade machine that was the home of your gameâ€¦when you stopped, spotting that it was occupiedâ€¦by a flowerâ€¦geez! It had to be right now? Why couldn't they have done this after you had left.

You didn't have that many quarters today anyway.

You slowly make your way up to the machine trying to decide if you should try and ask the plant to let you use the machine but you didn't know how long they had been there. You didn't want to kick them off if they had just gotten on, that would be rude.

After getting a closer look at the Flower occupying the machine, you could tell that they were fairly skilled at it with how fast they were tapping the buttons and moving the joy-stick.

Wow.

Your eyes move from their hands to their face, trying to see what they look likeâ€¦and you had to be honest. They seemed rather cute with a focused look on their features, their deep blue eyes glued the screen before them-

Wait a minuteâ€¦

Wasn't thatâ€¦noâ€¦it couldn't beâ€¦but it could be! The rumors had been true! Solar Flare, wasn't she one of the fabled Heroes of L.E.A.F? Your heart begins racing as you realize this! Buttttt- the speed it was racing at was absolutely nothing compared to the speed it was currently beating when she directed her attention at you. The game's screen showed that white 'Continue?' as well as the count-down timer.

She smiles at you, her yellow/orange-ish petals shaking as she tilts her head slightly.

"Hey,"

You quickly see that she is indeed talking to you and you shake your head in disbelief before responding,

"U-uh-um, h-hiâ€¦?"

You couldn't have sounded any less confident.

"I noticed you starin' me down. I hope I'm entertaining you."

She then does something that makes your heart leap: she lets out the cutest giggle you have ever heard and you go completely quiet. It sounds like she meant something else by that.

"I-I-I-uh, y-yeahâ€¦."

She smiles and turns her attention back to the screen and pulls out another coin from a bag of quarters that resides on that table of the arcade machine. You remember what you had walked over here for.

"I-I-, h-hey umâ€¦w-when will you b-b-be d-done?"

You meekly point at the game that she was about to put the quarter into. She pauses and looks at you then back at the bag of coins on the table, then back at you once again.

"Err, I'm gonna be a whileâ€¦"

You blink and sigh when she speaks up again-

"But we can play together if you wouldn't mind sharing."

You quickly look up as your heart leaps again. Was an Agent of L.E.A.F really asking you to play Street Fighter with her? Holy guacamole, you felt like you would faint but you kept consciousnessâ€¦somehow.

"Yeah!"

You voice slightly echoes through the arcade, catching the attentions of a few other plants as well as humans. You quickly lower your voice and steps in front of the machine as she steps to the side, over to the 2nd player controls. She glances at you with a smirk on her face.

"I hope you don't mind getting your butt kicked too."

Your eyes land on her, slightly surprised but didn't hesitate to take her words as a challenge and you sure as hell weren't about to back down.

"Bring it."

>Sooo?

_Yes? No? Maybe? Why am I asking you all these questions?_

_Because I would really like to know if I should keep going with this or not. So if it gets good traction, I shall pick up my bold pen and keep writing, add more characters and scenarios, you know, stuff like that. So... yay or nay?_

_So, I see that people do like it so I'm gonna go ahead and keep it going...I think I may start character requesting by the 4th or 5th chapter maybe..._

>Green Shadow:

"And then she just jumps off into the nightâ€¦it was awesome!"

You spin around on your heel to look at you cat, Oreo, who lay on your bed and lazily looks up at you.

"Don't look at me like that..."

Looking back at your cat, exhaling and pinching the bridge of your nose, you walk over to your bed and flop down, looking at the ceiling.

"Meow."

"Yeah, yeah, yeahâ€¦Meow, meow, meow."

You sigh again and begin thinking about last night for the 40th time today. All day at work, there was just something about that night which made you forget about everything else, including the altercation at work this morning. You didn't have your ID and the last place you remembered having it was in your wallet and you didn't know where the heck your wallet was but your supervisor was nice enough to let it slide for the time being and you weren't written up thank goodness. But you still didn't know where your wallet was, it had all of your important cards including your ID in there...

But back in your thoughts, you soon found yourself understanding why everyone around town called them 'Heroes'. Not only did she save you but she sure did look like a hero with a cape and a mask to match as well as look the part too.

Gosh, you felt like you were swooning over her.

Oh god, was that weird?

Probably.

You exhale and turn on your side, coming face to face with your cat who adjusted his position to nuzzle next to you, doing the cat things that he does best. You raise your hand to pet his soft black and white fur, listing to him purr.

You find yourself drifting back into your thoughtsâ€¦

_'Knockâ€¦knockâ€¦knock'_

You shoot up as you hear the knocking on your window. You look toward it, heart racing and everything. Oreo quickly turns his head in the direction of the sound, his ears pointed upward. Now, usually this wouldn't startle you this much since friends were always playing around, tapping on the windows butâ€¦you were on the 2nd floor of your home and unless they could fly, they weren't knocking on the windows up here.

You quickly scan your room for any items that can be used as a weapon when you spot your old baseball bat from your 9th grade's baseball team. You rush over and grab it before you begin inching your way to the suspect window, the bat ready behind your back.

Once in front of the window, you see nothing but the houses lining down the street and the night sky. You relax and sigh.

"What the hellâ€¦?"

You turn and look back at your cat who is still looking at the window and it wasn't a normal look either.

"Hey, that's the same look you get when you see a mouse,"

You turn back around and see that the window is open, blowing cool air into your room. Now you heart was racing from fear. You clutch your bat and as your mind begins to race with both questions and paranoid thoughts:

Oh god, had a sneaky zombie managed to slip in?

What if that zombie from last night had been resurrected by Zomboss just in time to come back and get its revenge?!

WHAT IF IT HAD BROUGHT IMPS?!

Your thoughts at interrupted when you in the corner of your eyes, you can see Oreo is no longer looking at the windowâ€¦he's looking behind you, in a defensive position; his back is arched and he's hissing in somewhat of a low growl.

Time seems to slow downâ€¦but your mind doesn't.

Without a second thought, you shut your eyes, spin around, swinging your bat at full force, ready to hit whoever or whatever it was behind you-

When-

You hear a thud.

Your eyes shoot open and you look, trying to find out why it stoppedâ€¦had you hit them?

"You should really watch where you swing hard metallic objectsâ€¦" A purple cape invades your vision. You move forward slightly to get a good look- "G-Green S-Shadow?!" You are completely dumbfounded and shocked. What the heck was she doing here in your house?! There were so many questions that had yet to be answered.

Her arm/leaf was extended and she was holding the bat by the neck.

"Pardon the intrusionâ€¦" She lets the bat go and you let it fall to your side, you still looked shocked.

"W-what are you doing in my house- "

She takes out a wallet and extends it toward you and it quickly silences you. "I believe this is yours, (Y/N), I assume everything in here is important, right?" You take it, looking at it for a second before looking over at her. "O-Oh, I-I was looking for this everywhereâ€¦" No longer shocked but surprised when you see the wallet, you remember when you had gotten attacked. It must've slipped out of your pocket when you had fallen.

No wonder you couldn't order out tonight.

"Please be more careful next timeâ€¦" She walks past you, her cape gently flowing in the wind, heading over to the window while many more thoughts run wildly through-out your mind.

Had she really taken her time to really come all the way to your home and return this?

Why had she done that?

A whooshing sound sound snaps you out of your thoughts when you spot her crouching on the windowpane. "H-hey wait!" She glances back at you, her eyes reflecting not only the moonlight but the stars as well. "T-thank you for returning my walletâ€¦a-also for last night." You chuckle. "I definitely didn't want to become that zombie's next meal." She gives you a small smile and a nod. "It's my job so you don't have to thank you...but it is always appreciated." With that, she jumps off into the night for a second time. You watch her dark silhouette gracefully jump from house to house until it isn't visible anymore.

You slowly turn back to your cat who seems to have relaxed but he's still standing on your bed. He looks over at you as you point at him a huge grin on your face.

"I told you it happened."

>Solar Flare:

"No wayâ€¦"

You can hear the voice of your friend (BFF/N), as you two walk toward the Arcade. You were telling them about meeting Solar Flare just the day before and as expected, they didn't believe you. How typical.

It was so typical that it was annoying.

"Rumors of the 'amazing heroes' have been going around for weeks, it's obvious that you're believing them now."

You sigh over dramatically and glare at your friend before stopping to push the doors to the building open and inside you both went.

Yesterday after babysitting your siblings, your parents paid you a decent amount so you had plenty of quarters to play for longer today. Annnnd after all the smack talking your friend did on the way down here, you needed to beat them at something, that is, if they didn't get all flustered run off like they had a tendency to do in the past. So, here you both were, making your way over to your favorite game; you know the one.

"I'm not stupid to believe a dumb rumor unless there's proof and you know that (BFF/N)."

"Yeah, well, since you say you saw her yesterday (Y/N), then tell me what she was wearing?" (BFF/N) stops walking and looks at you with an eye brow raised and a skeptical look on their face. You stop walking and turn around to face them, a smug smirk on your face.

You rememberedâ€¦_quite_â€¦well.

"Yellow petals, red tinted goggles, and a black tube-top with a white L.E.A.F symbol on it."

Scanning your friend's face for their reaction, you only smirk more, the smugness practically radiating off of you- their reaction was better than what you expected!

They looked absolutely shocked! Maybe too shockedâ€¦wait a minute- they weren't even looking at you!

They were looking behind you. Straightaway, you felt your stomach drop and your smirk immediately goes away.

"She's standing right behind me isn't sheâ€¦"

"â€¦."

Your friend's expression quickly changes back to normal. "No." They stick their tongue out, making a smug face of their own that annoys you to no end. "(BFF/F), you play too much." You groan loudly, turning back around to go where you were going before their little joke.

"Nah (Y/N), you just make it too easy." They chuckle as you walk faster, making distance between you and your jokester friend. "Yeah, I should've know you were joking the moment you didn't run off." You retort back to you friend, rolling your eyes. You turn back around and continue walking, ignoring your friend's protests of how they 'Don't run off!'.

You smile once you see that the game is unoccupied, though, a small part of you wished she was there again. You had fun with Solar Flare yesterday. She was a very skilled player but you were too and by the time you both finished, the game session ended in a tie.

It looked like she had met her match.

"We meet again, eh?"

While you were off in your thoughts, that small part of you wish had come true!

There the Sunflower was, standing next to you, holding a small bag that looked to be full of coins. "S-Solar?" You sound as though you were in disbelief andâ€¦to be completely honest, you were.

You hadn't even wished upon a star.

"Holy-" Your friend had soon caught up and was looking at the scene before them. "W-what are you doing here?" You quickly speak over your friend before they can exclaim any profanities. She rolls her eyes and glances back at you with an obvious look on her face. "The same thing you are, dude." She looks over at the game both you are standing in front of. "Oh yeah, dumb question."

You glance back at your friend and see them standing, silentlyâ€¦the shocked expression on their face actually looked genuine this time.

"Well it looks like we're in the same situation from yesterday." You chuckle and grin, turning back to her. "Yeah, looks like it." She agrees shifting slightly as she looks at you. "We could play versus again if your friend doesn't mind-"

Wait, she wanted to play with you againâ€¦okay, you now felt like you were gonna fall to the floor like yesterday.

You both look over at (BFF/FN) and they jump.

"Youâ€¦uhâ€¦.Iâ€¦..don't-"

They take off in the other direction, scrambling out of the building, almost tripping on the carpet that covered the floors before they even reach the door. You stare at them as they shoot out the doors and back in the direction you both came. All the while, your face is completely blank as you watch them go.

"Oh, there they goâ€¦" You shake your head and look back at Solar Flare. She was watching your friend too, the same blank look on her face.

"It doesn't look like they mind too muchâ€¦.errâ€¦." She looks as though she's confused about something. "What's your name again?" Oh, right, you never told her your name. "(Y/N)."

"Oh, (Y/N)â€¦." She says it as though she's testing it out and for her it rolls off the tongue easily. "I like it," She smiles at you and pulls out a quarter. "You ready to break that tie?" You take out your own quarter and smile.

"Heck yeah."
